INTRODUCTION.

Many years in the future, the posterity of the inhabitants of North Adams, wherever they may be, living here or scattered abroad in other and newer states, will look back with pride and family interest to the Annual Records of its people and their industries, arts, manufactories, public institutions, social interests and strident enterprise, of which record this book is only the first volume. The second will include 1886, and it is expected that subsequent volumes will be issued annually and continuously. Each volume will be interesting and valuable in itself, and they will increase in interest as in serial number.

In this town there is scarcely one family in which at least ONE interesting event or one birth, marriage or death has not occurred within the year, or one or more of the names of that family are not mentioned in the Annual Record in connection with some social, benevolent or business enterprise. Such a record will be of peculiar interest in the future, and will be valued in every family. It will serve in place of the neglected "family record" that is never kept posted up in the family Bible as it should be. In these volumes they will find the record of their own family, as well as of every other family in town. The back volumes will be frequently consulted, and the further back the more interesting they become.

A copy of the present volume should be secured while it can be had, as less than a thousand have been printed. It contains more facts about North Adams than ever before have been printed in any one book, and for each succeeding volume we may justly make the same pretension. It is handsomely bound, to lay on the centre table of the parlor or the living room for frequent reference or for topics for conversation of friends. Half-bound copies at a lower price may be procured by those who prefer them.

It is not claimed that this Record is absolutely perfect or complete, but that it is as nearly so as was possible in procuring the facts from authentic sources. Every year some few births, marriages and deaths of our townspeople occur outside of our limits and reports. Where these have not been traced out and recorded, they will, if made known to the publisher by postal card, be included in the next edition of the book, as well as the correction of names omitted or recorded erroneously or misspelled. The aim of the compiler of this volume is to make it complete and correct. A notice of omission or error will receive prompt attention. It is earnestly requested that pet names and nicknames and other ridiculous prefixes will not be presented for official registration by clergymen, physicians or private individuals in so serious and important a book as the ANNUAL RECORD.

North Adams has always been remarked for the enterprise of its people. Under the Record of Business Men in this book will be found the names and business of those of the present time most noted for their enterprise in supplying the wants and requirements of a thriving and ever-growing community. The origin of some of these establishments dates back many years.

HISTORIC RECORD.

NORTH ADAMS is situated in the northern part of Berkshire, the western county of Massachusetts, in latitude 42 deg. 40 min. N. and longitude 3 deg. 53 min. E. It is of perfectly rectangular form, 5 miles east and west and 3 1-2 miles north and south. Its meridian lines run due north and south, and its parallels of latitude east and west. It is bounded north by Clarksburg, east by Florida and Savoy, south by Adams and west by Williamstown. Originally included in the township of Adams, which was first known as East Hoosac, its early history is that of Adams from the first exploration of the wilderness and survey of the land in 1749 to the date of its separation from the old town. Adams was incorporated as a township October 15, 1778. Just one hundred years after (lacking only six months), on April 15, 1878, the town was divided into two equal parts, the new line between them running east and west. The southern half retained the old name of Adams, but the northern half took that of North Adams, which had always been the name of the village situated in the centre of the new town and near the junction of the north and south branches of the Hoosac River.

The history of North Adams has been traced with great particularity and completeness, from its very earliest settlement, in 1749, up to the present year, by Mr. W. F. Spear, for many years in the Post-Office, and now local editor of the Transcript. It is the only correct account of North Adams ever published, and bears witness to the untiring industry and ability of the author. The ANNUAL RECORD is but a continuation of Spear's history in a different form, and the compiler of this RECORD has freely taken "a word here, a sentence there, facts and statistics everywhere" from that very valuable and most interesting work. It was necessary to do so in order to make fair starting points for the various departments of the ANNUAL RECORD—a continuous history of NORTH ADAMS AND ITS PEOPLE in the future, of whom the author of "Taghcomie" says :

"But I think bright, busy, bustling, dashing North Adams, with its lively streets and peculiar surroundings, will show off well in this cool, clear atmosphere. To my mind, the most notable thing in this fine old town, or its bright village, is the people ; not to disparage some very noble scenery, or, perhaps, the most remarkable natural curiosity in the commonwealth ; and, least of all to speak lightly of, the grand tunnel. But North Adams is, I verily believe, the smartest village in the smartest nation in all creation ; the concentrated essential oil of Yankeeedom. As you pass through its streets you see evidence of this great truth everywhere ; in the shops, in the manufactories, in the hotels, and if these do not convince you, there will be no room for doubt when you come to the Hoosac Tunnel."

The area covered by the town is in some places exceedingly rough and hilly, so that one has here the advantage (and disadvantage) of immediate hill, cliff and mountain, and also fine views of magnificent mountain scenery. The village is well protected against loss by fires, having an unsurpassed water supply and an excellent fire department, the Fire District having been incorporated February 4, 1845.

BLACKINTON is a small and pretty village and manufacturing centre, located in the northwestern part of the town, on the boundary line of Williamstown. It has a good free library and a fine union church and school. The library was established in 1859, by the formation of a society with Mr. O. A. Archer as president, under whose influence and exertions a library of now nearly 2,000 volumes has been a free library since 1878.

BRAYTONVILLE is a small village on the Hoosac River, about midway between North Adams village and Blackinton.

GREYLOCK, a thrifty hamlet between Blackinton and Braytonville, is the seat of the Greylock mills, whose operatives are its only inhabitants.

HOWLANDS was the name of a settlement composed of the factories and operatives in xylonite (a chemical compound resembling celluloid). It was commenced about three years ago, a short distance south of the line between this town and Adams. The place is really a suburb of North Adams, most of its working people residing here. Houses for them are being rapidly built near the factories, and a good temperance hotel is projected, in reality it will be an extensive boarding house. The place assumes already the importance of a village, with a blacksmith shop, a brickyard and a post-office, officially known as ZYLOXITE.

The census of 1885 shows the population of North Adams to be 12,540, of which 6,059 are males and 6,481 females. Adams has 8,283 people, Clarksburg 708, Florida 487, Williamstown 3,729 and Pittsfield 14,466. The county of Berkshire has 73,828 and the state of Massachusetts 1,942,141 inhabitants.

From the assessors' books we find there are in the town 726 horses, 700 cows, 231 sheep and 56 swine; an increase over last year of 138 horses, 144 cows, 50 swine, and a decrease of 50 sheep the past year. The polls have increased 625, being 3632, and 126 new houses have been erected, making a total of 1658.

indefatigable State Engineer, chief constructing engineer of the Hoosac Tunnel. This elm tree is of historic and monumental interest, inasmuch as it marks the point of intersection of the old highway of travel to and from the West over the Hoosac mountain and the old "East road" (now Church street) leading to the great Hoosac Tunnel, four and three-quarters miles long, piercing said mountain and affording a convenient and cheaper avenue of travel and traffic between the great West and the New England Atlantic sea ports. The Centennial Elm Tree will, in the distant future, be a long-enduring monument of the Hoosac Tunnel, the construction of which gave a great start in the growth and prosperity of North Adams from 1869 to 1876, which, with the enterprise and energy of its people, will make the lively little village of 1876 the future metropolis of Western Massachusetts.

31. Last day of 1885. North Adams has advanced in every department of social, moral and business progress, and made a good record for the year, as shown by the reports of the selectmen, of the public schools, of the free public library and of the charity hospital from which are gathered the following particulars.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The public schools of North Adams under the administration of Messrs. Fred P. Brown, Oscar A. Archer and S. Proctor Thayer, school committee, and the able management of Mr. Anson D. Miner, superintendent, have maintained their high reputation for excellence and have enjoyed, as shown by the superintendent's official report, another year of earnest, successful work. The organization and grading of all the schools is at present better than ever before. Of fifty-five regular teachers forty-three have taught throughout the year. The secret of good schools is to secure good teachers and keep them. A few of the best have been drawn by larger pay to other fields; marriage, too, has taken some. By reference to statistics for the year it will be seen that gratifying gains have been made in nearly every particular: in numbers enrolled, average attendance, percentage of attendance, etc. Enforced vaccination and the prevalence of measles have seriously interfered with attendance. As regards percentage of attendance by groups of schools, Drury Academy stands first; Blackinton schools, second; Veazie, third; Union, fourth; Separate Primary, fifth. The course of study is nine years for the primary and grammar grades and four years for the High school. Several rooms have had but one class each during the past term. No room save the High school has had more than two classes at the same time during the year. The grading of several of the other schools has been improved. The change from an eight to a nine years' course in the Primary and grammar grades, which occurred a few years ago has been productive of good results. Since that time the standard of scholarship has been constantly advancing. The pupils are not overcrowded. The classes for admission to the High school have a better preparation. The discipline of most of the schools has been excellent throughout the year. No suspensions or expulsions have occurred, and but comparatively few cases of corporal punishment.

The instruction is that which leads pupils to think for themselves, which sharpens and develops the faculties of the mind and leads to good habits of study and to a desire for knowledge from the pleasure of acquiring. To this end teachers are urged to avoid the cramming process by emancipating themselves, as far as possible, from the thralldom of text-books, and by teaching clearly and patiently, by apt and original illustration; not assuming that what seems easy to the teacher will necessarily be readily grasped and retained by the pupil without repetition, but to make sure of a thorough and successful work, by sharp, searching and persistent questioning, by occasional reviews and by properly conducted written tests. Care has been taken in regard to the introduction of so-called reforms into our schools. Those of unquestioned merit have been adopted. None of the new methods of instruction which have real value can greatly lessen the necessity for work on the part of the pupil. It is as true now as in the past that there is no royal road to knowledge. The advantages of the new methods consist, in brief, of their better adaptability to the powers and capacities of the pupil, in the better interest and mental activity awakened, and in giving better power of thought and expression.

In arithmetic the work of the year shows decided progress. Large drill has been given in practical operations, outside of text-books, in reckoning money, in buying and selling, in rapid and accurate use of numbers, involving every variety of combination and separation. In language, also, including speech and its expression upon the written page the results have been very gratifying. The work in the Training school has been exceptionally good, especially in penmanship. This may be due in part to the fact that the larger teaching force enables the pupils to derive more individual criticism and assistance. As required by the new law, physiology has been taught in all the schools, with special reference to stimulants and narcotics. The pupils have exhibited much interest in the study, even in the Primary schools, and the examinations at the close of the year gave evidence of thorough instruction. In primary schools this teaching is oral, suitable text-books having been provided for the teachers. A good beginning has been made in carrying out the spirit of the law, the teachers evidently being in hearty sympathy with it.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

In 1859 the North Adams Library Association was formed. The first meeting was held in the stone office, corner of Main and Bank streets, then occupied by Dawes & Porter. Charles H. Williams, then a student in the office, was elected the first president, Frank Shephard first librarian and A. G. Potter first clerk of the association. The first object of the association was to form a reading-room in connection with the library, but this idea was given up after a time. When the building containing the library was burned, on the 9th of February, 1867, the books of the library were all saved by members of the association. A room was immediately engaged in the old Burlingame block, and Charles D. Sanford became librarian. He took great interest in the work, classified and arranged the books, and issued the first catalogue. The organization became very prosperous, having at one time several hundred members. The library remained here until about 1870, when it was removed to a room in Martin's block, against considerable opposition from the older members. It prospered and flourished here until about 1880, when the subject of a free public library and reading-room was talked of, and during the winter of 1883-4 the the present quarters were engaged, and the books of the old association moved in. In the spring of 1884, at the annual meeting of the town, the library was accepted by the town as a gift from the association and a sum appropriated for its maintenance. The wisdom of this course was very apparent the first year, as will be seen from the following facts taken from the report of the manager at the end of the first year of the maintenance of the first public library in town. The number of persons registered as takers of books up to the first of March, 1885, was 2629. The number of books drawn during the year, as shown by the records of the librarian, was 12,562; an average of 35.47 per month, or 136 per day, allowing 26 days to the month. At this time there were but 1000 volumes belonging to the circulating department, and the above figures would indicate that books equal in number to the whole number of volumes admitted to circulation were drawn once in each month of the year. This fact is of importance, not only in showing the demand upon the library, but as disclosing also, to some extent, the labor, the constant care and watchfulness of the librarians, in keeping proper records of the books drawn and returned and in seeing that none were lost or destroyed. The librarians who have had charge of the books at different times, as near as can be ascertained, are Frank Shephard, Charles D. Sanford, E. S. Wilkinson, A. B. Wright, S. H. Fairfield, E. A. Wright, E. D. Tyler and Arthur Witherell. All these before the library became free; after this Miss C. Augusta Dunton was placed in charge, and so still continues, most ably assisted by Miss Angela M. Veazie. On the first of March, 1885, the library contained 4750 volumes, of which 4129 were for circulation and 621 for reference. Of these 988 were purchased from the receipts of a fair for the benefit of the library, and 787 were purchased with money appropriated by the town. During the first year were some donations of books—one of special value by William L. Brown comprised 77 bound volumes of the "London Illustrated News" and 133 volumes of the "London Quarterly Review."

The benefits of a reading room, so far as they go, are essentially the same as those of a library. As now conducted, the reading room is a source of little expense aside from the cost of reading matter and lights. It has been orderly, well kept, frequented by large numbers of people in the day time and evening, and furnishes a kind and variety of reading not easily obtained elsewhere. That the library and reading room are held in high esteem by the voters of the town is evinced from the fact that at the town meeting in 1885, $3000 was appropriated for its maintenance.

PUBLIC HOSPITAL.

From the earliest settlement of the village, the men were noted for their enterprise and liberality and the women for their hospitality and benevolence. Charitable acts from ready hands and kind hearts, quietly bestowed, are said to be not without their reward and are recorded where, we trust, they may cover a multitude of sins. But, by far the most interesting event in this town Record of 1885, is one which, though a truly noble charity, is from its nature so open, free and general in its benefits that history may justly and proudly record it as the great event of the year.

On March 2, 1885, the NORTH ADAMS HOSPITAL was opened to the public, its beneficence extended to the afflicted, and the care of the edifice formally turned over by the building committee to the Board of control. Experienced nurses having been engaged from New York, all requisites were provided for work, as was supposed, in the most complete manner. On the opening day, it was estimated, fully fifteen hundred people visited the building, where appropriate exercises were conducted by the local clergymen. The first officers were:

President—Mrs. Mary Williams.

Vice-Presidents—Mrs. Helen A. Archer, Mrs. Anna W. Richmond, Mrs. Harriet E. Gallup.

PUBLIC HOSPITAL.

M. Brayton, Mrs. Ruth E. Millard, Mrs. Delia J. Houghton, Mrs. Carolyn B. Wright.

The first annual report of its organization and usefulness was made November 7, 1885, by the Board of Control. From their report are compiled facts of great interest to the "generous minded citizens" as they are characterized by the worthy president of the board, which, it is proper here to state, is composed entirely of ladies who kindly and bravely, but with "no small anxieties entered upon the untried work with no funds in the treasury and no experience to greet them."

These ladies, the representatives of themselves and one hundred and fifteen other most excellent women, were members of the original corporation. They compose the several standing committees of finance, admission, supply, furnishing, nursery service, inspection and auditing, necessary for the government and successful operation of the hospital. The officers for 1885, as stated in the report of that year were :

For several years, especially during the construction of the great Hoosac Tunnel, the need of a hospital in this village was very evident, but the movement to establish an institution "for the care and treatment of the sick and disabled" first took definite form immediately after the terrible accident in the Troy & Greenfield Railroad yard, October 21, 1882, generally known as the "caboose accident." The necessity for a suitable building for the purpose named was then most apparent, and the same day a paper was circulated among our citizens for subscriptions for the establishment of a hospital, Messrs. W. L. Brown and W. S. Johnson giving their personal attention to the matter.

The manufacturers and their employees, merchants and citizens of North Adams generally, and friends, not residents, but interested in its welfare, responded liberally to the call, and the subscriptions, large and small, aggregated some twelve thousand dollars, and a call for a meeting of the subscribers soon appeared in our local papers.

This meeting, in the parlors of the Wilson house, February 16, 1883, appointed a committee of five, comprising W. L. Brown, C. T. Sampson, H. G. B. Fisher, W. S. Johnson and W. A. Gallup, with "full power to proceed, not only in obtaining plans and purchasing a lot, but also in the erection of the Hospital."

This committee met for the first time at the Wilson House, Friday evening, March 2, 1883, and organized. They decided that the Evenal Estes lot, situated north of Liberty street be considered as to its desirability as a site, as this property was then advertised for sale; at which sale, March 3, 1883, a member of the committee, bidding thirty-four hundred dollars, secured the property. The plot of land thus bought contained about thirty acres, improved and unimproved, lying north of Liberty street, and extending from North Eagle street to Houghtonville. It was deeded to the committee by J. Rockwell, as executor.

An architect was engaged to submit plans for a suitable building, and prominent New York hospital physicians were consulted, the architect being present, as to the desirable features to be embodied in such a structure. After much deliberation plans were settled upon, and the plans and specifications submitted to several first-class builders for estimates. It was decided at this time to build only the main and central portions of the proposed Hospital, and the contract was awarded to Bartlett Bros. of East Whately, Mass., the lowest bidders. This action was taken August 13, 1883, and the contractors began work at once.

PUBLIC HOSPITAL.

The corner-stone of the building was laid October 27, 1883, public exercises of an appropriate character being held, Judge J. Rockwell and Rev. H. I. Bodley delivering addresses, and Rev. Drs. McKean and Osborn also taking part in the exercises, with vocal music under the direction of Mr. David Roberts. That the public was deeply interested in the project was attested by the large attendance and deep interest shown.

The building was soon closed and the work of finishing went on during the winter and spring months, and late in the following fall water, gas and sewerage connections were made with the town systems.

Meantime an agreement of association had been signed by the members of the committee, and also by some seventy ladies of the town, representing the various religious organizations, and application was made to the state authorities for the incorporation of the North Adams Hospital under the general statute for the incorporation of religious and charitable societies, which application was granted and a charter issued under date of December 29, 1884.

The Hospital was opened to the inspection of the public, with brief dedicatory exercises, March 2, 1885.

The building, unfurnished, with land, represented at that time an investment of nineteen thousand dollars, and the corporation was possessed of same by deed from committee.

The Treasurer's report shows the expenses of furnishing and surgical instruments was $1,923, and alterations, repairs and other expenses $748, with the current expenses of maintaining the Hospital were $2,308. But there have been received from:

The Board of Health, Messrs. Thayer, W. H. Bixby and Dr. C. J. Curran, report unusual good health having prevailed throughout our community for the past year; and that we have experienced no contagious disease of a serious character.

There has been reported during the year a number of cases of scarlet fever, which were mostly of a very mild type, and only one case of which proved fatal.

Typhoid fever has not prevailed to any extent; proving fatal in one case only.

Measles has been the prevailing disease throughout the town, mostly among the very young and school children, though there were several cases among the older people. There have been three deaths from the disease, two of which were persons of advanced years.

Diphtheria has been less prevalent the past year than during the year 1884, but of a more malignant type. It broke out in the south part of the village at one time to an alarming extent, from which six deaths followed, one after another, in quick succession. By persistent and well-directed efforts they succeeded in confining the contagion to the locality where it first made its appearance. From careful investigation they were led to believe that the same was brought from abroad in wearing apparel or otherwise, rather than caused by the surroundings.

The small-pox, coming very near us, led them immediately to take somewhat extreme measures in requiring all classes of inhabitants to be vaccinated. This caused some ill-feeling at the time; notwithstanding, without much trouble, we succeeded in getting a very thorough vaccination throughout the town. This was attended with considerable expense, but they thought it better to incur the expense rather than take any risk in the matter. Thanks to the manufacturers and citizens generally for their efficient co-operation in this work.

The impression seems to have gone abroad that this is an unhealthy locality. This impression is not warranted by the facts in the case. Having had their attention called to this matter for the last four or five years, the Board can honestly assert, and is prepared to prove beyond controversy, that this town is as free from typhoid and malarial fevers, and diseases of all kinds of a serious contagious character, as any town of its size in the commonwealth. Much good has been done the past year by filling up wet and unhealthy places. The Boston & Albany Railroad Company has abated, or nearly so, one great nuisance south of their round-house. In order to do this successfully the selectmen were called upon to change the Chesnut street sewer. This they did as soon as possible, at quite a large expense.

Commendable improvements have been made in a sanitary point of view in that part of the village south of Main street.

Filling in has been done where necessary, cellars have been properly cleaned and whitewashed, and premises have been kept more tidy and clean, so that at the present time that part of the village is in a much more healthy and better condition. North of Main street, also, people have taken more pains in cleaning up their premises and keeping them clear of all decaying and deleterious matter.

Notwithstanding all this, much greater sanitary results should be accomplished the present year by the timely removal of all waste matter; by discarding the use of well water as far as possible; by connecting all dwellings and out houses with the sewers, as far as practicable; by a stringent enforcement of the laws relating to contagious diseases, and being alive and vigilant to every requirement pertaining to manly vigor and good health.

In the early season the Board of Health ordered all swine to be removed beyond the limits of the Fire District. This called forth some severe comment, but the hog had to go just the same. From this nuisance, the village has been quite free through the hot weather at least. As all can appreciate the breathing of pure and wholesome air uncontaminated by the hog pen stench, those who want to keep hogs, will see the propriety of keeping them beyond the limits of the Fire District.

The Board earnestly recommends that at the next annual meeting of the town a more liberal appropriation of money be made for the building of sewers. This is a very important matter and should be so considered. Many people are obliged to use cess-pools, because they have no sewers to carry off the waste.

Cess-pools are a very great nuisance, the receptacles of soapsuds, drainage and filth, from which foul stenches and noxious gases generate and arise, which render the air we breath impure, and thus causes malignant diseases and death.

The sewer at the lower end of Main street should be enlarged, sufficient to receive the surface water and discharge the same below Hodge's dam. The sewer should be extended up East Quincy street so as to accommodate all people possible in that neighborhood. Other streets there are in the village over which sewers should be extended, so as to accommodate the citizens.

The good health of our community is to a great degree our prosperity and happiness. We should, therefore, use great foresight, untiring energy and liberal expenditure of money to accomplish this end.

The Board of Health also recommends that all persons throughout the fire district use the hydrant water as far as possible, rather than water taken from their wells. Well water is more or less impregnated with impurities of all kinds running in from the surface, rendering it unwholesome and dangerous to health, while the reservoir water and water from the driven wells has been pronounced by Messrs. Mowbray and Pierson to be pure, or nearly so, and free from vegetable or deleterious matter, and in every way suitable for domestic use. These chemists made a very careful and thorough analysis of water from the reservoir and driven wells free of expense to the town (thanks to their generosity for so doing), and gave the results of their investigation as afore stated.

The Board of Health received during the year one hundred and thirty complaints, and gave each of them, as soon as possible, such attention as the nature of the case required, viewing all parts of the village and looking after the general welfare of the people, by advising and directing in such matters as seemed to be needful to a good sanitary condition of their premises.

The importance of having the bridges kept in safe repair should be among the first considerations on the part of the town officers. Nearly a dozen intersect the different streets. Over these bridges water and gas pipes were carried. It was found that the vibrations and shocks caused by travel were the cause of constant leakage, and the gas thus set free contaminated the atmosphere, rendering it unfit for breathing anywhere in the neighborhood of such leakage. This has been remedied to a great extent by passing the gas and water pipes over or under little iron bridges separate from and independent of the public bridges near them, insuring the purity of the atmosphere and preventing the waste of water.

For what they have done, and recommend to be done for the ensuing year, the grateful thanks of the people of North Adams are due to the gentlemen of the Board of Health, and are now fully expressed and Recorded.

PUBLIC PARK.

The Park Commissioners have expended the three hundred dollars appropriated for improvements in the Park to the best advantage, by building such walls as were necessary to prevent former improvements from being washed away, and in repairing the road to and inside of the inclosure. They have filled in and graded the ground, built a good stone aqueduct to take the water from the west side and covered the same with grass. The grounds begin to assume a park-like appearance, and the fine views it affords of the valley and mountains compensate for the trouble of reaching it.

This Park is a delightful place of resort for young people, and in fine weather has many visitors on Sunday afternoons and evenings. It is utilized for picnics on a small scale by children on Saturdays, and on a large scale by certain societies on some public holidays. All the visitors seem to appreciate it and try to keep it in good order.

CEMETERIES.

The Selectmen recommend that, inasmuch as there are no more desirable lots in the cemetery to sell, it is necessary to provide more land for burial purposes without delay. The sale of lots last year amounted to nearly fifteen hundred dollars. There was paid to Mr. Orr, the superintendent, for labor and care of the cemeteries, $1,095, including $300 voted him by the town for the previous year.

There should be a strong and high picket fence constructed on top of the low wall on the north side, which separates the grave yard from the railroad, but does not guard it from trespassers in the daytime, who jump over it to make a short cut through the cemetery to reach the main road, nor from tramps and worse characters who, by the same easy and unobserved approach, infest and desecrate the grounds during the summer nights.

ST. FRANCIS' CHURCH, ROMAN CATHOLIC.

The corner-stone of the spacious edifice on Eagle street was laid in the summer of 1867, and the church was completed and dedicated in July, 1869. The first church was built on Center street, prior to 1860, at which time Father Edward H. Purcell succeeded to the pastorate at Pittsfield and attended to the mission in North Adams. In the same year Rev. Charles Lynch was appointed assistant at North Adams. "In less than two years the Roman Catholic population had so increased that Father Lynch was appointed Pastor here, with missions in South Adams, Williamstown and at the east end of the Hoosac Tunnel. From which time till the 28th of May, 1883, he labored assiduously in his charge, when he was stricken with paralysis, and died at 53 years of age, after 21 years of service in this town." By his efforts the Roman Catholic churches in South Adams and Williamstown were also founded. He was succeeded by Father Charles E. Burke, the present pastor, whose flock of 3500 English speaking Roman Catholics all worship in St. Francis' Church.

THE CHURCH OF OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART.

The French Canadian people here, who had up to 1870 worshipped with the other Catholics at St. Francis' Church, were in that year allowed to have a pastor of their own nationality. Rev. Charles Crevier took charge of the congregation in January, 1871, and rented the old chapel on Center street. After four years this chapel was abandoned for the basement of the new and elegant church this congregation has now nearly completed in a slightly location on East Main street. Rev. Father Charles Crevier, to whose untiring labor, energy and enterprise this success is chiefly due still continues the pastor, and has in his congregation upward of 1000 persons—families of industrious mechanics and factory operatives, law-abiding and frugal, not one individual of them all being connected with the sale of spirituous liquors or any other disreputable or nefarious occupation.

A MISSION OF FRENCH CANADIAN PROTESTANTS

has regular services in a convenient room assigned to them on Eagle street, in a part of the extensive structure belonging to the Baptist Church, through the liberality of that society, which also sustains two other missions in conjunction with the Congregational Church.
